

Classroom Life Story

By Gönül Canbay

It is Monday morning, and there is a new student in our class. Her name is Ayşe. She asks "What time is it?" at the school gate. I say "It is quarter to nine." We walk slowly to the classroom and hang our coats. A big poster says "No running" and "Pay attention." Another poster says, "Make the grade if you want to join the Sports Club!"

There is a timetable on the smartboard. We read it together: Monday—English, Maths (double lesson), Art; Tuesday—Science, Turkish, P.E.; Wednesday—IT, Social Studies, Music; Thursday—Religion and Morals, English; Friday—Drama and a class meeting. Ayşe asks “What time does English class start?” I answer “It starts at nine o’clock and finishes at half past nine.”

Our teacher smiles and says, "Don't skip the lesson! Please sit quietly." She holds a board marker and writes, "Classroom Rules: Raise your hand. Don't shout. Be careful with the materials. Tidy up before you leave." There is a rubbish bin near the door and a big bookshelf near the window. I give Ayşe a seat next to me.

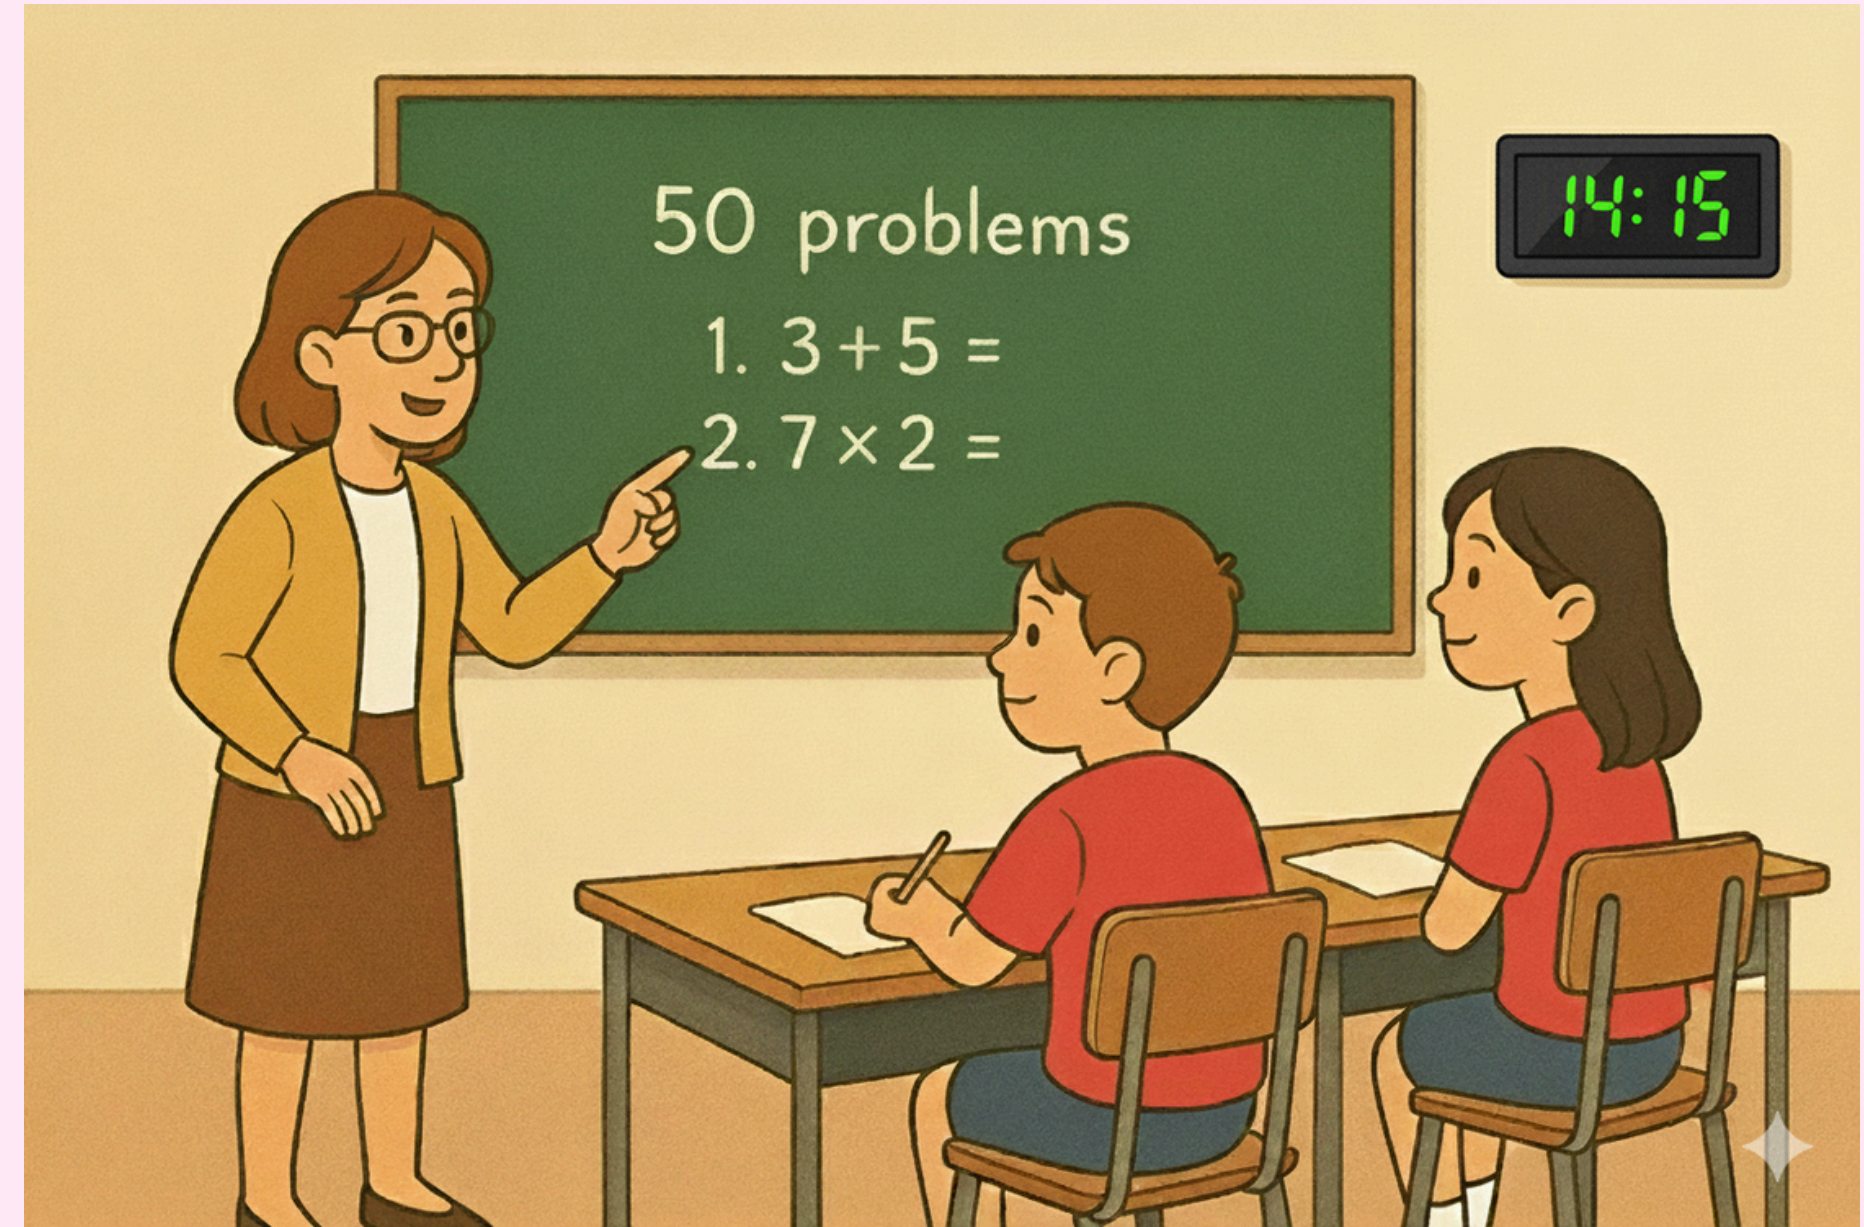

During English, there is a new word list on a sheet. I forget my pencil case, so I whisper, "Can I borrow your rubber and a pencil?" She lends them to me and says, "Give them back to me after the break." I say, "Thank you. Give me a hand for this homework later?" She replies "I'd love to."

At break, we walk to the garden. She says "Hold on a minute, I don't feel all right." She sits carefully on a bench. I say, "Let's drink water and rest until noon." We talk about weekends and weekdays. On weekends, she visits her grandmother. On weekdays, she follows the timetable and studies.

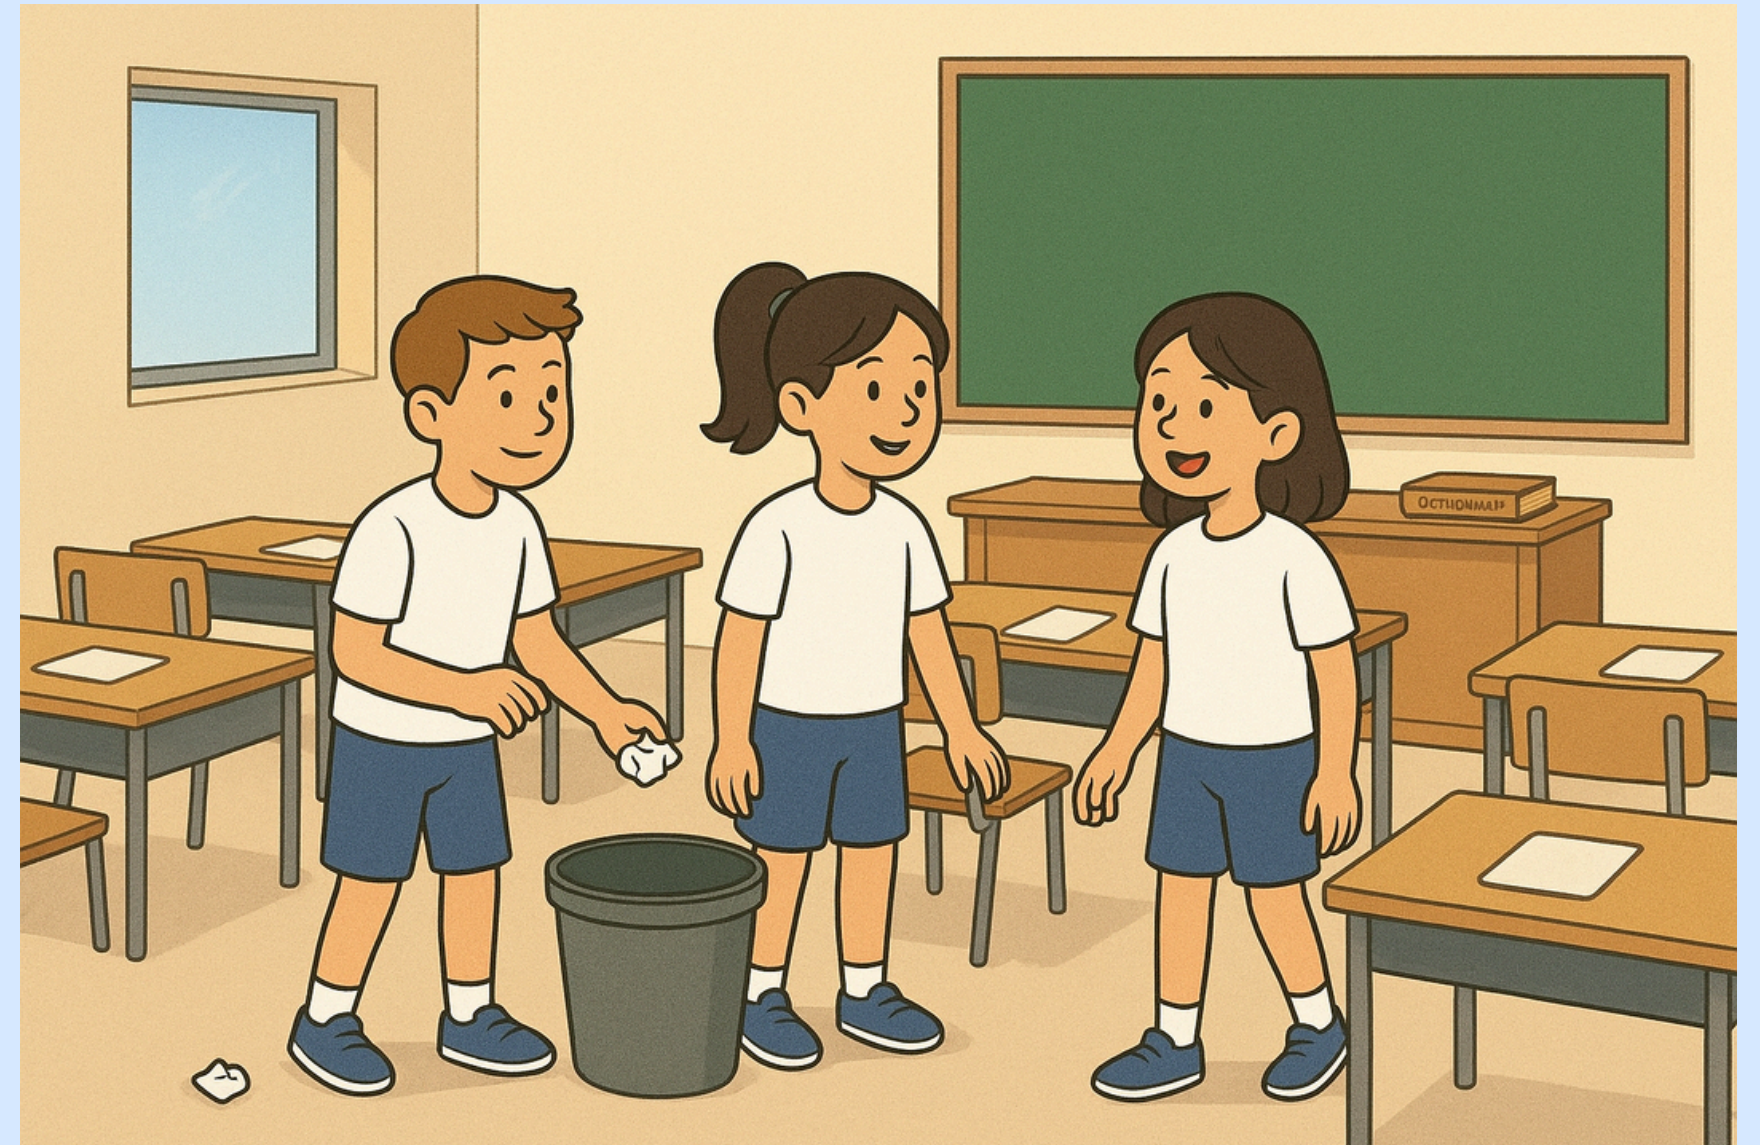

After lunch, we have Maths. The teacher says loudly, "There are fifty problems today, but don't worry, we solve them step by step." We work quietly. I help her with question twenty. She helps me with question twenty-one. We check the clock: it is quarter past two. P.E. starts at half past two.

In P.E., the coach says, "No running in the corridor. Follow me to the gym." We listen carefully. We practise slowly at first, then faster. The coach tells Ayşe, "Make the grade if you want to join the Sports Club!" She smiles and promises to try.

Before we leave, we tidy up the classroom. There are notebooks on every desk, a dictionary on the teacher's table, and a little rubbish on the floor. We throw the rubbish into the bin. I say, "There is a holiday next week—23 April National Sovereignty and Children's Day. We will prepare songs in Music." Ayşe says, "That sounds fun. Can you help me?" I say, "Yes. Sit with us, and we will teach you the lyrics." We walk home together, already planning Friday's Drama scene.

By the end of the week, there is a new friendship in class. She feels at home, and we feel proud to follow our rules.
